Grammar

In English, we often use the structures used to + infinitive and would + infinitive to talk about things that we did regularly in the past, but not now.

1) Used to + infinitive

-We use used to + infinitive when we talk about things that happened regularly in the past but do not happen now.

-In the negative we say didn't use to + infinitive

Ex. I used to play in the snow every winter.

I used to get up early to go to school.

I didn't use to go to bed so late.

2) Would + infinitive

-When we are telling a story or recalling a situation from a long time ago, we often prefer to use would + infinitive to describe repeated behaviour in the past. However, both would and used to are possible:

Ex. I remember growing up in home town. My life was completely different. I would get up early every day and go to school.

In the winter, I would play in the snow with my friends.

Idioms / Useful Expressions

1 a / somebody's second childhood – a situation in which someone starts to behave like a child, especially because of mental weakness caused by old age
