Attention, students. Sometime today, you will hear the fire alarm. At that time, everyone must go outside into the schoolyard. If you are playing sports outside, do not come back into the school building. Please take this fire drill seriously. It is important that everyone knows what to do in the event of a real fire, so follow your teacher's instructions carefully.

Question: What will happen today at the school?

The country of Peru in South America has some ancient towers called the Thirteen Towers of Chankillo. They were built about 2,300 years ago. Scientists believed that people once used the towers to mark the position of the sun. The towers show where the sun rises or sets at different times of the year, so scientists think they were used as a kind of calendar.

Questions: How do scientists think people used the Thirteen Towers of Chankillo?
