Leadership Roles

Have you ever considered the various roles that a group leader might take on? There can be many different kinds of leadership roles in groups; two of the many possible kinds of leadership roles are instrumental leadership and expressive leadership. Instrumental leadership is group leadership that emphasizes the completion of tasks by the group. Instrumental leadership is focused on getting the task done. Expressive leadership is different from instrumental leadership. Expressive leadership is leadership that is concerned with the well being of the group; expressive leadership is leadership that is concerned with ensuring that all members of the group are comfortable working together.

Now listen to the passage.
